Bids For Construction Of New Science Building At College Are Received

Lowest Bid Exceeds Amount Appropriated

Friday, October 17, bids were opened to contractors at Murray State College for construction of the proposed new science building.

The new building will consist of four stories and will cost an estimated $500,000.

Present plans call for erection of only the first floor this year, for which the state legislature has appropriated $176,000.

Four contractors were on hand to submit bids on the structure Friday. The lowest bid, $220,941, was received from George Katterjohn and Son, Paducah.

Ralph Woods, president of MSC, stated today that college officials will hold a consultation tomorrow with Evans McGraw, state engineer, to see what steps can be taken.

Woods said that it may be necessary to eliminate some of the fixtures, and otherwise cut corners, to bring the construction costs down to the amount appropriated by the state.

James Bondurant Undergoes Operation Sunday Morning

James Bondurant, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Bondurant, was operated on Sunday morning for a ruptured appendix.

Although young Bondurant's condition Sunday was considered serious, his mother reported today that he is getting along as well as can be expected.

James is a junior at Murray High School and is a member of the high school band.

BAREFOOT MINER—With most of the men recruited for work in near-by uranium mines, many young women in Senftenberg, Germany, labor in the soft coal mines, which are in the Russian zone. Due to the shortage of work clothes, many women, like Elli Kober (above), work barefooted.

Douglas High Wins Three to Maintain Winning Record

The little and mighty grid machine of D.H.S. continues to roll on after having been defeated once by Manassas of Memphis by a score of 12 to 7.

As the season grows older the machine seems to operate more effectively, with less friction and with added speed and power.

The team is as powerful this year as it was last year, although it has only five backfield players.

Douglas has beaten Springfield, Tenn., 28-0, Jackson, Tenn., 12-7, and Henderson 6-0.

The next two games will be played in Murray. Bowling Green October 24, and Gains October 31 on Douglas field at 2:30.

Both of the schools have splendid records and will try hard to beat the Western Kentucky champions of 1946.

There is ample parking space on the Douglas field and anyone who desires to do so may drive in, sit in the car and see the game.

More and larger ponds are being built by farmers in Grant county, one covering almost five acres.

Of 9,000 acres planted to corn in Wolfe county, four-fifths are hybrid.

Certificates Are Awarded Those Completing Home Nursing Course

Members of the American Red Cross home nursing classes have recently been awarded certificates by the local chapter. The completed course represents 12 hours for unit 1, 24 hours for unit 2, and 30 hours for the high school classes.

Unit 1 received instruction in care of the sick in the home, and unit 2 was instructed in the care of the mother and child. High school classes received instruction in both of these phases of home nursing.

The classes were taught by Mrs. Margaret Canfield, home nursing representative from the eastern area, Alexandria, Va. She was engaged by the local chapter for a period of three months, from September 1 to December 1.

Those receiving certificates are: Hazel High School, Hazel, Dor-

Emerald Design, Chapter Bull Of F.F.A. Is Sold

The Training School F.F.A. chapter bull, Emerald Design, was sold to the Murray Livestock Company Tuesday, October 14. He was a two star bull, five years old, and has been located north of the college stadium for the past four years.

The bull has been kept more for a community service than a money-making enterprise, but the chapter members voted to sell him and give their support to the artificial breeding program that is being organized in the county.

Emerald Design was grand champion bull at the Calloway County fair in 1946, and placed second in the aged bull class in 1947. He weighed 1,385 pounds and brought 15 cents per pound.

Dr. Hugh L. Houston Is Honored By Fellowship In Medical Society

Dr. Hugh L. Houston, of the Clinic-Hospital staff, received word last Saturday that he had won a Fellowship in the American College of Chest Physicians.

This international society is composed of 2500 physicians doing chest work in 37 countries of the world. It meets once a year, at which time, the new advances in treatment of heart and lung diseases are brought before the profession.

Membership is attained in the college by one's record in medical school, post-graduate study, interest in heart and chest diseases, and professional standing in his local, state and national medical societies.

If the above are in order the applicant must successfully pass a written and oral examination given by the Board of Examiners for the College.

Dr. Houston took the examinations in June 1947 at Atlantic City. He will receive the formal degree on June 17, 1948, in Chicago, Ill.

Alfonzo Farmer Receives Multiple Chest Injuries

Alfonzo Farmer was injured yesterday in a trucking accident at a gravel pit near Concord.

Examination at Houston-McDevitt Clinic revealed that six ribs were broken from the breast bone, and the left lung was punctured.

Farmer had parked his truck at the gravel pit and gone to the rear to fix the tail gate. The brakes failed to hold and the truck rolled back pinning the driver against a tree.

Farmer, owner and operator of his own truck, had hired out to the Vanover Trucking Co. He was working on a road between Hazel and New Concord.

Farmer's condition, was reported as favorable today, although not much improvement could be expected yet.

Veterans Receive Over 54 Million In Loans Under GI Bill

Kentucky World War II veterans have negotiated 11,304 home, farm and business loans totalling $54,754,927 under loan guaranty provisions of the G. I. Bill, Veterans Administration Regional Office, Louisville, reported today.

The total includes 9,547 home loans for $47,822,262; 932 farm loans totalling $4,245,626; 825 business loans aggregating $2,687,003.

VA has guaranteed approximately 47 per cent of the total advanced veterans by lending institutions. Loans may be guaranteed up to 50 per cent of the principal of the loan, but not to exceed $4,000 on a real estate loan, or $2,000 on a non-real estate loan.

Farm loans must be repaid within 40 years, other realty loans within 25 years and non-realty (business) loans within 10 years.

"Corn Is Green" Begins Rehearsal At College

Following general try-outs in which fifty or more students competed for roles in the first dramatic offering of the year, Emlyn Williams' comedy "The Corn Is Green" went into rehearsal this week.

Director Joseph W. Cochran has announced that Martha Gaskins and Ann Lowry will share dual roles in the coming presentation on November 20 and 21. The two girls will portray the roles of Miss Moffat and Mrs. Watty. The girl who plays Miss Moffat in the first performance will play the role of Mrs. Watty in the second performance and vice versa.

William Pettit of Paducah, Ky., will carry the male lead—the young coal miner who wants to know "what's behind all those books" in the Moffat study. Others in the cast include: Jack Bullis, Faye Edwards, Barkley Jones, Bill Herman, William Johnson, Bill Taylor, Bob Hefflin, James Garner, Peggy Bowen, Patsy Ann Sowers.

The plot of "The Corn Is Green" is concerned with what happens when two women of widely different temperaments compete in bitter rivalry to shape one man's destiny.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. Oct. 21 (UP)—Tom Simmons, a veteran news reporter got even today with the girl who fluffed powder in his soup.

Simmons said that he was tired of women using cosmetics at restaurant tables. So he came prepared for revenge.

While at dinner at a girl at the next table "brazenly powdered her face," he said. "Some of the powder floated into my soup."

Simmons asked the waiter for a "bowl of hot water."

The next moment Simmons pulled out a tube of shaving cream and a razor and started shaving.

"If the girls can make up their faces in restaurants," Simmons said, "I can shave at the table, too."

Today's Sports Parade

By Oscar Fraley
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (UPI)—Football is a bruising business, you might call it. Arnie and Well-Laced, so it isn't hard to understand the lusty humor which arises when the boys are sitting around cutting up the rough touches.

There were many raised eyebrows in the effete Ivy League when Howie Odell, Yale Coach, breathed a sigh of relief because injured halfback Levie Jackson didn't have a skull fracture. "But only a head deformity, thank goodness," English Dick Duden, Navy scout, went him one better today.

Duden, talking about Penn Center Chuck Bedparik, was explaining that the lineman had been kicked in the lungs and was spitting blood.

But I don't think it's anything serious, Duden shrugged.

Norhalance, evidently, is a handy attribute in the face of assault and battery. Something like that of the young freshman halfback who cockily reported to a Big Nine school with a fistful of press clippings. Starting in his first game he fumbled the kickoff in the end zone, picked up the ball, went to midfield, left his blockers, reversed his field, found an opening and went 105 yards for a touchdown.

The Coach yanked him out and bawled him out.

"You did everything wrong," bellowed the coach. You fumbled, left your blockers and reversed your field. All wrong.

"How," the kid came back, "was it for length, coach?"

Of course, you also can get in trouble if you don't take a firm stand. Just as did Jack Lavelle, the Notre Dame scout who was put on the pan for hedging about the ability of the Fighting Irish.

I can tell you that Frank Leahy (Notre Dame coach) is a brave man, Lavelle said. "You have to be to challenge Michigan. But as for taking a stand on Notre Dame's power, let me ask you something.

"Did you ever try to nail a custard pie to the wall?"

Lavelle apparently isn't too certain about just what the Irish have. And it's a good thing to know whereof you speak. There were two instances of this of late. Just like a belligerent ballplayer might only be asking the umpire about the weather, you can't always tell what they're doing on the field.

For instance, in the bitter Navy-Cornell game there was a big hand for Navy Coach Tom Hamilton when he apparently assisted Cornell end Matt Bolger to his feet after the latter had fallen out of bounds. They called it sportsmanship. Actually, Hamilton and Bolger are old friends and Bolger, one of college football's old men coming back after war service, had bent down and whispered to Hamilton:

"Say Tom, isn't this a helluva game for an old guy like me to be playing?"

And there was that toe-to-toe meeting between the Yankees' Spec Sanders and Brooklyn's Martin Ruby which the fans thought might develop into a slugfest. The 250-pound Ruby had piled on and Sanders, looking up, sharply told him to "knock it off." What the fans didn't know was that Sanders and Ruby were old Texas friends and, when they faced off, Sanders was apologizing for his sharpness and Ruby was telling him to forget it, old man.

On the other hand, if you're a fan, it pays to watch who you're talking to. Like the Washington man who saw a game in Baltimore. Afterwards he climbed into a taxicab and proceeded to comment to the driver, that the Colts were "A bunch of bums."

The hackie slammed on the brakes, opened the door and said: "Get out, I'm a Baltimore fan!" It's a rough sport, all right.

The Spencer County Farm Bureau bought 1,100 pounds of Ky. 31 fescue seed for 25 farmers in the county.

New Concord Home Makers Club Meets With Mrs. Nance

On Friday afternoon, October 17, at 2 o'clock, Mrs. Tom Nance was hostess to the New Concord Homemakers Club in the pretty colonial home of Mrs. Emma L. Nance. The house, was decorated throughout with fall flowers very artistically arranged by Miss Maude Nance.

Mrs. Charles Stubblefield, president, presided over the following program. The devotional, a portion of the 109 Psalm and a poem "The Builder" was read by Mrs. Aubrey Farris.

Miss Rachel Rowland, home demonstration agent, urged some of the group to enter the Courier-Journal and Louisville Times Home Improvement contest, commented on the Calloway County Fair and announced that Mr. Jesse B. Brooks, extension agricultural engineer, University of Kentucky, will be in Murray Tuesday night for a discussion on home water systems.

Miss Erin Montgomery then led a discussion about the Red Cross Home Nursing course which will be given to the women of the community by a Red Cross nurse in the Home Economics room at the school house which will begin Monday, October 27, at 1:30 o'clock.

The major project leaders, Mrs. Frank Bacy and Miss Erin Montgomery then gave the lesson on pattern alterations discussing the suitability of the pattern to the material and what a well fitted, well made garment should look like. They also explained to the club how to shrink both wool and cotton material before making a garment.

The program conductor, Mrs. Aubrey Farris, then led the group in singing some songs and in playing a very amusing game.

The hostess, Mrs. Tom Nance assisted by Mrs. John Nance and Miss Maude Nance then served a very delectable dessert plate to the eight members and Miss Rowland and the following visitors: Mrs. Gregory from Hopkinsville, Mrs. Housden from New Providence and Mrs. Emma L. Nance and the following children, T. Patterson, Judith Farris, Sammie Housden and Johnnie Nance.

The next meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Milburn Evans on November 21.

J. D. Wells will leave tomorrow for his home in Zethur Hills, Fla., following an extended visit with his brother, Dr. Rainey T. Wells and family, Hazel Road, and other relatives in Murray and Calloway County.

Mrs. Gattlin Clifton of the Coldwater Road, Dr. and Mrs. Abner Clifton of Milan, Tenn., visited Dr. Clifton's sister, Mrs. J. S. Tarter and Mr. Tarter of Murfreesboro, Tenn., last week.

Tau Phi Lambda Has Monthly Meeting At Churchill Home

The Delta Mu Chapter, Tau Phi Lambda Sorority of the Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Outhrie Churchill, the sponsor. The ritualistic meeting was called to order by the president, Miss Lynn Radford.

Following the business session, Miss Oneida Ahart, national president, reported on her recent visit to Beta Iota Chapter, Indianapolis, Ind., where she participated in a special Founder's Day program commemorating the tenth anniversary of the sorority.

The social committee made plans for the sorority's annual tea for chapters from neighboring towns. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and after a short social hour the meeting was adjourned.

The next monthly meeting will be held November 10 at the home of Miss Fay Nell Andersen.

Homemakers Club Meets At Pottertown

Pottertown Homemakers Club had an all day meeting Thursday, October 16, at the home of Mrs. E. M. McCuson.

The lesson on "Patterns" was given by leaders, Mrs. Raymond Ragdale and Mrs. Dallas Wicker. Twelve members and four visitors were present.

The November meeting will be with Mrs. F. A. Outland at the "Oaks Camp". The lesson on patterns will be continued in the November meeting.

SUMMER BEAU

By MARGARETTA BRUCKER

Deborah Parrish, who lives with her young sister Nan in Little Harbor, a summer resort, has a job in the post office there. A year has passed since she lost her head over a handsome summer visitor, Craig Benedict, who made love to her and then dropped her, but she still cannot forget him and the humiliation he caused her. To make matters worse, a fellow worker and former beau, Fred Craven, who has nursed a grudge against her ever since her infatuation with Craig, continually taunts her with Craig's fickleness. One afternoon she meets another good-looking summer visitor, Geoffrey Harriman, through an accident. Her ankle is wrenched when Geoffrey's dog trips her with his leash. Geoffrey drives her home and asks to see her again, but she's afraid to become involved a second time with any young man from the summer colony. However, that evening, when her friend Maud Harman comes to see her, she can't disguise the fact that her encounter with Geoffrey has given a lift to her spirits.

CHAPTER IV

THE next morning, Deborah's ankle was a little swollen, but the worst of the pain was gone. She experimented walking back and forth across the bedroom in her slippers before trying on her shoes.

"Geoffrey Harriman," he read from the letter. "New man in town, Deb." The inference was unmistakable.

Nan smiled. "You shouldn't try to go to work today. I'll stop in and tell Mr. Hunt that you're not able to come."

"And have Fred Craven die with curiosity to find out what has happened?" Nan made no reply to this at the moment, but after they were seated at the breakfast table, she said bluntly: "Fred Craven hates you, Debbie. He's determined to get even because you turned him down for Craig Benedict last summer. Sometimes it frightens me."

"You and Maud? Just alike," said Deborah, always imagining McCuson. He is also visiting his little son, Keys.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Self and son and daughter, William Ray and Juanita Pearl, and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dick McNutt visited Mrs. Katie Ellison and family Sunday afternoon.

Miss Ruth Fulcher accompanied her brother, James Fulcher who had been visiting here, to Alton, Ill., Sunday.

I saw little Donny Walker's picture in a Louisville newspaper. It was a picture of him in the hospital for crippled children. It showed him bed with a birth-day cake with seven candles on Fred will work out some dark revenge. He would be pathetic if he wasn't so ridiculous.

"He's not ridiculous," said Nan flatly. "I'd be scared to death of Fred if I were you."

"Never let any man scare you," Deborah answered calmly.

"Why did you let Craig Benedict do that to you?"

Deborah looked up and then away from Nan's clear gaze.

"Do what, baby?"

"Hurt you. And now you judge all men by Craig Benedict. You know you do."

"And what of it?"

"This. It makes you hard when you aren't hard. It makes you bitter, and you're too sweet to be bitter. It makes you suspicious."

"And I've always been the most simple, credulous."

Deborah broke off, tossed down her napkin and hobbled over to the window, with her back to Nan. It was humiliating to have everyone pity her. Maud and Nan pitying her.

"Debbie—I'm sorry," said Nan. "You needn't be. You only say what everyone thinks."

SUDDENLY Nan was beside her, with her arms tight about her neck. "Debbie—it's just that you're so swell. I know how much you've missed because you had to take care of me. I know that you stayed with me at night when you should have been out meeting people and having fun. Well, I'm going to make things up to you now. I've got a job and—"

"We'll discuss all this later," said Deborah flatly.

Nan's cheeks were bright pink now. "But we can't. You see, I've taken the job already. I go to work this morning."

"You did that without consulting me?"

"Can't I do anything without consulting you?"

"You cannot take a job in a summer shop, Nan. You'll get all sorts of crazy ideas. You'll have your head filled with longings for clothes you can never afford to buy. You will envy the girls you see whose fathers have money to hand out for anything they crave. You're a poor girl, Nan. Don't forget that."

"How can I when you remind me of it every minute? All my life I've heard nothing else! Well, there's no reason why I should stay poor, and I don't mean to!"

It was the nearest they had ever come to quarreling. Always, before Deborah could make Nan see things her way. Now there was open rebellion in Nan's hazel eyes.

Maud interrupted, coming in to drive Deborah to the post office. "What in the world is wrong?"

"She asked as Nan rushed by and through the front door, slamming the screen behind her."

"Obviously Nan is growing up," said Deborah briefly.

Maud diplomatically asked for no further explanation. Together they left the house and drove down the hill to the town.

"You really shouldn't work today, Debbie," worried Maud.

"I can," said Deborah, and meant it.

Work was the best way she knew to forget personal troubles, and Nan's determination to make her own decisions had upset her.

FRED was curious about Deborah's limp. He followed her about, not satisfied with her explanation that she had twisted her ankle on the way home the previous evening.

There was a heavy mail that morning for Box 58.

Fred said, "A guy came in yesterday afternoon and rented that box. His name is Harriman. Ever hear of him?"

He addressed everyone. His glance traveled down the room and then fastened upon Deborah.

"Geoffrey Harriman," he read the name from a letter in his hand. "New man in town, Deb." The inference was unmistakable.

George Mitchell said, "Shut up, Craven, and get to work."

"Since when is it against the law to be curious about the summer people? Haven't I heard you wonder who this one or that one may be? Isn't it our business to keep informed?"

Craven said curtly, "If you must have information, Harriman is the grandson of old Mrs. Thomas who owned that brown shingle cottage down the shore. I understand from Kenny Harmon that Harriman wants to sell the place, and is looking for a buyer."

"Rich guy, eh?"

HALF an hour later, when Fred was outside helping to load the mail sacks, Geoffrey came through the door and right past the window where Deborah stood. He stopped at Box 58, removed the mail and started to walk slowly away.

Then his glance met Deborah's as she stood framed in the stamp window and he stopped.

"Hello—what are you doing here?" he exclaimed.

"Delight at seeing her was written all over his face."

"I work here," said Deborah. "And the ankle?"

Deborah was aware of Fred returning. She said hastily, "Quite all right, thank you," and busied herself down some parcel post slips.

Geoffrey stood for a minute with a baffled expression upon his face, then walked away.
